SUCCEEDING ON THE COURSE :

This training requires assessment of two independent elements, both of which must be satisfied, if participant is to successfully complete the course:

- 1) A continuous assessment of participant auditing capability, written and oral communication skills, performance as a team member and in role playing, as well as attitude and timekeeping.
- 2) A written examination

Continuous Assessment:

People who are going to conduct successful system audits need certain abilities and attributes. There is a high level of agreement on these abilities and attributes by employers of auditors and those experienced in conducting audits.

The course facilitator will be continually evaluating participant's demonstration of these abilities and attributes.

Participant will be continually monitored on the following aspects to gauge participant's suitability and capability as a future auditor or lead auditor:

- i. Auditing capability
- ii. Written and oral communication skills
- iii. Attitude
- iv. Timekeeping

Criteria for these evaluations include:

- i. Contribution to discussion such as asking questions, communicating within the group, accurate reporting of situations and effective general participation
- ii. Clarity and technical soundness of written and oral assignments
- iii. General attitude and manner towards the subject, the course and participant course colleagues
- iv. Participation in role playing workshops
- v. Timekeeping

If participant do not appear to understand the course material, participate in the course activities or exhibit behaviour unbecoming to an auditor, participant will be personally notified and counselled by the facilitator. Participant must subsequently demonstrate improvement during the rest of the course to pass the continuous assessment. Counselling by itself does not mean a failure on continuous assessment.

The examination grades and the continuous assessment are used to determine whether or not participant have been successful on the course. Both must be passed.

Full-time attendance for the duration of the course is required to pass the continuous assessment.
